EPISODE ONE:

A WORD FROM OUR HOST

Good morning, everyone, and welcome to another season of The Tyrell Show. Why do I call it that? you ask. Because I'm Tyrell and this is my show . . . I guess. To all my regular listeners, I say, "Hey," and thanks for joining the livestream podcast that takes place in my head. And for all the new kids listening, thanks for joining me! And I do mean kids 'cause if you're an adult checking out my show, let me take this time to share something my mother taught me, "STRANGER DANGER!" There, I had to do that. The Tyrell Show is a safe place for me to share my thoughts on my life, and well, having some weird old adult I don't know listening in is definitely not cool.

Okay, glad I got that out of the way. Like I said, this is a new season of The Tyrell Show. The minute school was over last spring, I took the summer off from doing my podcast. I had a lot of fun! I went swimming in the neighborhood pool, which was great! Me and my friends only got kicked out four times, which is way better than last year, when we got kicked out twelve times. I guess following the rules is a good thing. Still, I never laughed harder than when my best friend, Boogie, belly flopped into the pool next to Monique. She SCREAMED at him! It was hilarious! We got kicked out for that, and if I'm being honest, I hope we get kicked out for the same thing next summer. Like I said before, Boogie is my best friend, AND he's kind of a giant, so his splash was epic! He should do it every year. It could be like a big party with food and rides and fireworks . . . we could sell tickets. It would be amazing! If he does it again next summer, I promise to do a special episode of my show so that you can at least hear the splash.
