

Some NHL trophies are awarded by statistics, like the Art Ross Trophy, which goes to the scoring leader, but most trophy winners are selected by a vote. Members of the Professional Hockey Writers Association vote on many of the trophies, but not all of them. For example, the Vezina Trophy, which goes to the league's best goalie, is selected by the general managers of the 30 NHL teams, and the Jack Adams Award for best coach is selected by members of the NHL Broadcasters' Association.

CUP CAPERS

When the Islanders won the Cup in 1980, Bryan Trottier took it home . . . and slept with it! “I wanted to wake up and find it right beside me,” Trottier explained. “I didn’t want to think I’d just dreamed of this happening.”
