Hi Everyone,

On the occasion of Klutz's 40th anniversary, I wanted to share with you an abridged passage from The Klutz Book of Inventions, written by Klutz founder, John Cassidy, and IDEO's Brendan Boyle. It moves me every time I read it and inspires the team at Klutz every time we create a new product.

How to Think Like an Inventor

Fear of failure, of looking like a fool, is the single biggest obstacle to human progress in the history of history. If we could remove one single change to human DNA, removing the fear gene would be it.

In the meantime, we have a less surgical fix—we call it “play.” Most people will tell you “play” and “work” are opposites. Work is serious; play is playful. Playful people are wasting time; serious people are doing productive work. But serious people are also concerned about the indignity of making mistakes, whereas fools wallow in them.

Progress is filled with mistakes. The lesson here for any inventor-to-be is play with your problem. Do not be afraid. Go for lots of ideas, ridiculous to practical, and then go back looking for winners. Celebrate your mistakes; learn from them.

Dignity is the enemy of invention.

At Klutz we believe in the power of play. We believe in helping kids build creative confidence while understanding that only by making a lot of wrong turns can you achieve something awesome. Thank you for being such an integral part of the awesomeness of Klutz for the last 40 years, and helping to create wonderful things, be good, and have fun.

Warmest,

Stacy
