Chapter 17: The Truth Comes Out

Working with Words—Text Features

In order to communicate what characters are thinking, authors use text features. For example, a cartoonist will have a speech balloon above the thinking character's head connected with small circles. In written text, authors may use italics to indicate a character's thoughts.

Skim chapter 17 and find four examples of some of the character's thoughts that the author has indicated with italics.

1. _____

2. _____

3. _____

4. _____
