

Triple Treat – Reinforcing Writing Behaviours When Creating Own Books

Stage 1:	Writing Behaviour
My Place	Good writers try writing the words they need, even if they are not sure about how they are spelled. They look closely at the order of the letters and can tell if they have put them in the right order.
Look at Me!	Good writers love making up their own stories, and they make sure they write all the words they need to tell their story.
Having Fun	Good writers remember how to write many words and love to learn how to write new words.
How Many?	Good writers love to share their writing with others.
Stage 2:
Who?	Good writers make sure their illustrations match their story.
Hiding	Good writers try to make their stories interesting for their readers.
Toys	Good writers write about things that they know a lot about.
Scrub-a-Dub	Good writers read through what they have written to make sure that it makes sense to the reader.
Stage 3:
Shapes I Can See	Good writers use punctuation so that their readers can understand their stories easily.
Seasons	Good writers try to use interesting words when telling their stories.
I Spy	Good writers check the first, middle, and last letters of the words they are writing. They remember how to write words they use often, too.
All Aboard!	Good writers remember to use punctuation so that their story makes sense.
