

Judd loved chemistry. He loved the powders and potions and beakers and tubes. He loved it all so much he had managed to get his mom and dad to let him make a laboratory in the garage. Judd would spend hours there mixing, dabbling, and experimenting.

Judd kept a large tank full of goldfish next to his workbench. Judd loved his fish as much as he loved chemistry. He liked their color and the feeling of calm they gave him. He could watch his fish for hours.
