

Mama pulled several sockeye from the stream and the family feasted. Bellies full, they headed for home, leaving the remains of their meal behind for other animals to eat.

The cubs were all tired. Katmai, still trailing behind her siblings, was glad that no one felt like racing.