Rave Reviews

“With a condensed page size and number, each book presents information in an easy, breezy manner....Perfectly suited for toddler browsing collections. Stick these in baskets on the floor of the early learning area so they don’t get lost on the shelves.” (See pages 32-33)

—School Library Journal

“An updated take on “Nature’s Children” with new authors, new text....A balanced combination of general content and specific examples works effectively, with data relevant to individual species clearly noted....First-rate animal profiles for upper grade elementary students.” (See page 27)

—School Library Journal

“Designed with primary-school readers in mind, these books utilize large fonts, ample white space, and liberal illustrations, which range from historical documents and artwork to modern photographs....Excellent introductions to some important figures in history and at work today.” (See page 28)

—Booklist

“Crisp photos, maps, or charts appear alongside reader-friendly text, and several titles address the negative impact of poverty and human conflict on animal populations, giving added scope to the books....A nice big-picture resource for young researchers or animal advocates.” (See page 36)

—Booklist

“Large clear photos introduce kids to the splendor of nature, while the text covers each park’s history, most scenic spots, and unique plants and animals....A top choice for elementary schoolers.” (See page 28)

—School Library Journal

“Clear, colorful photos offer armchair travelers enticing views of the parks and their wildlife. The books individually introduce the history of a particular locale and describe how it became part of the national park system....these accessible books offer information as well as eye-catching photos of natural wonders.” (See page 36)

—Booklist

“This volume...packs a surprising amount of information despite its slim size. In clear, simple text geared toward younger readers, it breaks the complicated science of the stars and the solar system into digestible facts....A fine resource for early STEM lessons, and a quality introduction to the stars.” (See page 30)

—Booklist

“The books in this series are filled with fascinating facts and information on a wide variety of prehistoric animals. The information is presented in short passages illustrated with colorful cartoon-style drawings....This series will appeal to young scientists of all ages and reluctant readers. Recommended” (See page 33)

—School Library Connection

“Overall, the author approaches the content with an upbeat tone, and the good-quality photos, many of which feature children, nicely supplement the texts. VERDICT The conversational style and wide range of information included will make this a useful series for report writers and browsers.” (See page 25)

—School Library Journal

“A typical spread features a short paragraph surrounded by a mix of info boxes and diagrams or figures, which spout facts and crack punny jokes. The primary goal here is to entertain, at which the book generally succeeds, hopefully sparking readers’ curiosity to dig into more comprehensive books.” (See page 34)

A True Book™ — ALL NEW! Alternative Energy

We use energy every day. It fuels our cars, powers our cell phones, and provides light through the night. For centuries, people have relied mostly on fossil fuels such as coal, oil, and natural gas to provide this energy. In this A True Book subset, readers will find out what makes renewable energy sources such as solar, wind, water, and geothermal power safer and healthier than fossil fuels. They will also learn how these energy sources are likely to impact our future.

Thermal Features

Geothermal heat escapes from underground in many ways. One of the most dangerous is a volcano. A volcano is a vent in Earth's surface. Magma, or melted rock, flows up from deep below and collects in pools, or reservoirs, beneath the planet's crust. This magma escapes as lava through volcanoes. Hot gases, ash, and fragments of hot rock may also erupt. These substances might shoot out with tons of force, or they might slowly ooze.

Warning: If you stand in Hawaii, it always stays erupting.

Earth's Layers

Earth has four basic layers: the crust, the mantle, the outer core, and the inner core. Temperatures are hottest in the inner core. This heat moves outward through the outer core and the mantle to the crust. Earth's crust is not solid. It is broken into several pieces called tectonic plates. These plates push, pull, and slide against one another. Geothermal energy is easiest to reach where two plates meet, especially if those plates are pulling apart.

CRUST	Eight inches to miles into tectonic plates
MANTEL	Layer 1 to 6,000°C (Layer 2 to 5,700°C) Soft, flexible rock
OUTER CORE	Layer 1 to 5,000°C (Layer 2 to 5,000°C) Liquid iron
INNER CORE	Layer 1 to 5,000°C (Layer 2 to 5,000°C) Solid iron

CHAPTER 1

Majestic Giants

It's springtime in Yellowstone National Park. The sun shines, melting the snow piled all around. A male grizzly bear awakens. He has been asleep in his den all winter. The bear moves slowly at first. You would, too, if you'd been asleep for five or six months!

The bear tumbles out of his den and blinks into the bright sunlight. He rises on powerful legs—he's over 6 feet (2.8 meters) tall when standing. The bear stalks the air, then sets off through the sagebrush in search of a meal. He'll munch on grass at first. But it won't be long before his quest for meat begins.

Grizzlies are a type of brown bear. They once roamed across the western half of North America, from up north in the Arctic all the way south to central Mexico. But those days are gone. Today grizzlies are found only in the states of Alaska, Wyoming, Washington, Idaho, and Montana. There are also grizzlies in northern Canada.

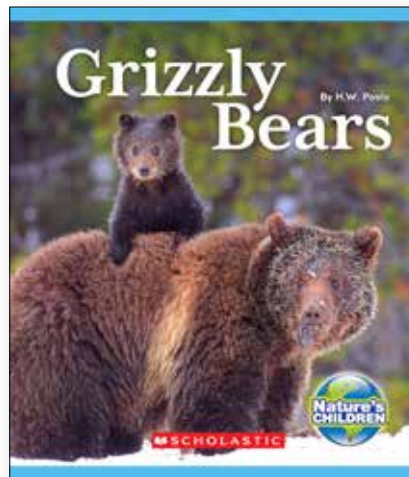

▶ Grizzlies' spines aren't attached to their skulls, so they're very stretchy.

You Wouldn't Want to Live Without

Astronauts in Orbit

Orbiting spacecraft carrying people are satellites, too. More than 300 spacecraft carrying people have been launched since the first, Vostok 1, took Soviet pilot Yuri Gagarin into orbit in 1961. After the US Space Shuttle stopped flying in 2011, only Russia and China have been able to launch crewed spacecraft into orbit, but at least ten new crewed spacecraft are being developed by space agencies and private companies. If satellites had never been invented, astronauts would never have orbited the Earth and they would never have landed on the Moon.

Top Tip
The International Space Station is so big that you can see it in the night sky. It looks like a bright star. Visit <https://spacelink.nasa.gov/> sightings. Type in your town to find out when you can see it.

THE FIRST CREWED SPACECRAFT, Vostok 1, made one orbit of Earth. It proved that it was possible for people to go into space and return safely.

EIGHT APOLLO spacecraft orbited the Moon as lunar satellites. Six of these missions landed a total of 12 astronauts on the Moon.

RUSSIAN SOYUZ SPACECRAFT have been carrying people to Earth orbit since the 1960s. Today, they carry people and supplies to the International Space Station.

Artwork from You Wouldn't Want to Live Without Robots!

What's So Good About Robots?

Lots of the things you use every day were built with the help of robots. Robots are used because they often perform better than people. Robots can work around the clock without having to take breaks or go home. They don't get tired. They don't need vacations or get sick. And they can work faster and more accurately than people. What do you think would happen if robots weren't here? If people had to replace them, complex products like computers and cars would take longer to build, and they would probably cost more.

POWERFUL ROBOTS can reach straight into human worksites. They can move amazingly heavy things around safely and with great precision.

ROBOTS CAN WITHSTAND heat, snow, radiation, and other conditions that are harmful to human workers. They can do dangerous jobs and work with hazardous materials without taking human lives.
