A note from the author

My university degree is in biology and botany (the study of plants), so like David, I love science. Science is all around us, and with climate change, pandemics and other concerns, it's more and more important that people understand it. Shows like The Nature of Things with David Suzuki make people more interested in and comfortable with science.

Meet David Suzuki

1. List five things that you already do or could do to help the environment.
2. Make a sign that you could hold up at a rally in support of protecting the environment. What images or slogans did you include on it?
3. When David was a teenager, a nearby marsh was where he loved to spend time in nature. Write two paragraphs about a place that's important to you or where you'd like to spend time.
4. If you became a scientist, what sorts of discoveries would you like to make? Write a journal entry about it.
5. Do you have a favourite tree or type of tree? List five things you like about it.
